[ In fact, on the night of August 1, only hours after "Tommy Z." appeared in the newspaper, Zaino had a close brush with death. As he closed up his auto body shop, Zaino was shot at by three men who drove past the front of the building in a car he couldn't identify. Zaino was promptly placed under police protection and housed in a motel across the Verrazano Narrows Bridge in Staten Island. And although he was now under an official umbrella, the protection wouldn't last indefinitely. After a few weeks he'd be on his own again, a potential target once more.

Larry Milenko would be heard from again. In late 1987, police would raid his home and arrest him on drug charges. Interestingly, this North Dakota woodsman would then retain the services of a high-priced Miami law firm to represent him in the case. It is also worth noting that the arresting officers in North Dakota observed that Milenko possessed a collection of occult books, as well as hoods and capes, according to Minot Det. Mike Knoop.

Even more curious, Process leader Robert DeGrimston himself was residing in a private home in Eastchester---a scant few miles from Untermyer Park---in the early and mid-1970s. The "coincidences" were simply too numerous to be written off. Too many people were in the right places at the right times.

The unsolved S&M murder of shipping magnate Edgar "Paul" Luckenback will also be described---a killing that was directly linked into this "scene." Also tied in is the ritual murder of Sheldon "Shelly" Blum, the owner of a disco populated by individuals who play heavy parts in this story---including the pimp named Deuce who frequented cult meetings at Untermyer Park and also by another male who several years later was actually present at two Son of Sam crime scenes.

In addition, this chapter will outline the disappearances and alleged murders of three young boys from an upper East Side apartment occupied by a prominent pedophile. For an illustration of just how tight this circle was, this pedophile was a frequent bed partner of The Poet.

As for the child murders in the pedophile's apartment, detectives believe that three "well-respected" males used the apartment and committed these crimes in a sex ritual that went out of control. One of the alleged killers was a Park Avenue heart surgeon---another an oil executive involved in OPEC, and the third was a stringer for a certain U.S. intelligence agency. In fact, this agency squashed search warrants and subpoenas in the case on the grounds of "national security."

Police interactions with Roy Cohn regarding this case will also be discussed. Cohn told cops: "My job is to clean things up, and I'm cleaning up after this one." A youth who escaped said the other boys were buried in the woods surrounding a Connecticut farm. Roy Cohn owned just such a farm, which was the former estate of ex-bootlegger and Schenley liquor baron Louie Rosensteil. The youth's description of the property perfectly matched that of Cohn's farm---a fact the police didn't discover until years later, long after the property had been sold and turned into a condo complex.

David Berkowitz also attended at least one large sex party at Cohn's house, in the company of several members of the Sam cult. It was here, and at other parties like this one, that Berkowitz saw first-hand some of those whom his cult leaders and Process were involved with on levels far above his. He has named names.

The participation of a handful of named organized crime members in this overall environment will also be documented. These people, who controlled a number of sex and gay bar businesses in Manhattan and distributed child porn, later assumed peripheral roles in the Son of Sam case. Specifically, one SOS shooting was done as a "favor" to these interests.

Members of the Sam cult associated with a few of these OC affiliates on the bar and club circuits. (One of these OC players was gunned down on a Manhattan street just five days after NY Mayor Beame held a press conference to announce the birth of the so-called "44-Caliber Killer," aka Son of Sam, and the formation of a task force to investigate the .44 shootings.)

After outlining these background facts, which will be enhanced by details about some of this era's relevant pedophiles (wealthy individuals who interacted with Process and the emerging "Son of Sam" cult in child sex operations), the chapter will close with a set-up for a significant event which occurred in mid-1975. It was then that David Berkowitz was first exposed to, and subsequently joined, the Son of Sam cult.

CHAPTER SEVEN

THE NEW RECRUIT

This chapter will focus on the circumstances which resulted in David Berkowitz joining the Son of Sam group, which was already aligned with Process by the time he was recruited. Berkowitz's move to an apartment on Barnes Ave. in the Pelham Bay section of the Bronx---as well as his somewhat traumatic discovery of, and "reunion" with his birth mother---were major factors in his deterioration.

Finding his real mother led to the knowledge that he was actually illegitimate. He also learned that his mother had kept a half-sister while giving him away. (Many years later, the author would be meeting with Berkowitz just as he received word that his mother had died.) Berkowitz's move to the Barnes Ave. apartment was also very significant. It was there--at a coven party the SOS group was holding in the building---that by chance he first met key members of the cult.

The chapter will then flash back briefly to Berkowitz's origins. Berkowitz will tell much of his own story here, covering his birth and adoption, his childhood, his school years and his enlistment in the army. He will explain his loneliness upon returning home from the army, and how that loneliness made him vulnerable that 1975 night on Barnes Ave. in the Bronx.

Berkowitz will detail how that first encounter led to his regular association with cult members, including Michael Carr. He will describe his susceptibility, and how at first he viewed his budding friendships with these people as an innocent, though exciting way to meet some new and "unusual" girls. He will describe the early cult meetings---screening sessions actually---which were held in a few wooded areas of the Bronx---including Van Cortlandt Park, at the very same spot where teacher Karen Wahlstrom was killed 10 years before.

Berkowitz will speak of his "graduation" from these sessions to the next level of involvement, at which point he was taken to Untermyer Park in Yonkers one night and formally initiated into the "major league" group of insiders. He will, in his own words, recite the "prayer" he spoke at this induction ceremony.

Berkowitz, supported by the author's narration, will describe some of the cult members---what they were like and what they did by day, etc. For example, a pair of sisters, both cross-eyed and both hookers, were frequent attendees---as were a young man who'd been arrested for child molestation, and another young male who worked in the Yonkers Post Office. Of interest, this man would later be turned in as a Son of Sam suspect by his former girlfriend's father. It was an accurate suspicion.

The attendance of Process members at the SOS group's rituals will be described; and "The Painter" will be re-introduced here. The Painter first appeared in Chapter One, and he will re-surface here to provide more details about his unknowing, first-hand flirtation with Process and the Sam cult.

The Painter is a star witness, a non-conspirator whose June, 1976 portraits are vital and conclusive evidence from Untermyer which includes: "Ken" from the Process (now positively identified and today a technical magazine editor in a mid-Atlantic state); the old man whose wake was described in Chapter One. This man was the top leader of the Son of Sam cult and a real estate professional who acquired properties for New York State and was politically connected in Westchester County. The Painter also sketched "Maria," who always accompanied "Ken from the Process" to Untermyer. Maria was murdered in Westchester two months after Berkowitz's arrest. The case remains unsolved.

The Painter also drew "Pete," who has been positively identified and was later a convicted killer. Pete conspired with the sister of yet another cult member to murder the sister's former boyfriend---and carried out the plan. Both went to prison.

Finally, The Painter provided the names of three other cult members who also have been positively identified. These three individuals lived in the northeast Bronx and were acquainted with Donna Lauria---who would be the first Son of Sam victim. (Donna wasn't a random victim, as the police claimed).

Berkowitz will also list some of the crimes the cult committed during his early days with the group: arsons, animal sacrifice, drug dealing, and the transport of illegal weapons. The cult's child sex activities will also be highlighted---and Berkowitz's corroborated statement that the Process was pimping kids to wealthy clients will be explained.

The fact that some SOS cult members were also committing rapes during this time period will be discussed---as will the group's rituals at Untermyer which were frequently highlighted by sex with children between the ages of 12 and 14.

These kids were often brought to the park by the pimp named Deuce---who, along with a few fellow pimps, is a major figure in this story. These pimps, who interacted with Roy Cohn, politician Howard Samuels and other political and entertainment figures, were well-known by Process and members of the Sam cult. (They were a source of young children, especially boys.)

Deuce was the main procurer of young boys for a member of one of America's wealthiest families. At least two young boys pimped by Deuce later died of drug overdoses. They have been

CHAPTERS TWENTY-FOUR AND TWENTY-FIVE

INVESTIGATION: 1997

This chapter, and also the following chapter, will cover in detail the official 1996 and 1997 investigations of Process and the Sam cult: past and present.

Included will be confirmatory law enforcement interviews of the pimp named Deuce, who in December of 1996 and January of 1997 told, in great detail, of the involvement of wealthy New Yorkers in child porn and murder---and confirmed again his 1971 statement to an NYPD detective that kids were being killed in Untermyer Park long before the Son of Sam case began.

Deuce, a fascinating character in and of himself, is now in his late '60s. But in his heyday, as noted earlier, he was the "keeper" and procurer of young boys for a member of one of America's wealthiest families. He was also a friend of actress Elizabeth Taylor, boxing champion Emile Griffith, actress Leslie Uggams, and singer Marvin Gaye, among others.

Police have confirmed that Deuce was involved with Marvin Gaye during the time Gaye thought (as did Emile Griffith) that he could function as a high-class provider of beautiful women to the celebrity set. In fact, police themselves had told Marvin: "You're either a singer or a pimp, and if you're a pimp we're going to arrest you." Deuce also told Leslie Uggams that certain individuals (whom she didn't know were actually pimps) were plucking girls from the chorus line of a hit Broadway show she starred in.

As for Elizabeth Taylor, Deuce became friendly with her through his association with Howard Samuels' driver---the same man who procured young boys for Samuels. Samuels was a friend of Liz Taylor. Deuce actually spent time at Norman Rockwell's summer home, which Liz once rented from the famous artist. He also "rescued" one of Taylor's kids from the influence of Samuels' driver, who had taken him to the locked OTB offices for sex.

To trick Deuce into talking in late December, 1996, arrangements were made to bring to New York the same, now retired detective for whom Deuce was an informant between 1970 and 1977. How this plan was accomplished will be described, as the former detective, wearing a wire, knocked on Deuce's door and met him for the first time since the mid-70s.

Among the reams of new information that came out of those talks, the 1997 investigators learned why Deuce's original statement about the murdered kids was suppressed in '71---and by whom. For example, one of those involved in the 1971 cover-up was a police officer who in 1978 would marry one of the Sam cult's leading female members!

It has also now been determined which of Deuce's pimp allies were providing kids to the cult at Untermyer in the pre-Son of Sam years. One of those two pimps actually worked at a few Westchester orphanages in the early 70s, and detectives had suspected the other involved pimp of additional child murders as far back as '72.

To top it off, David Berkowitz has also identified, by name and photo, both of these pimps---who were still associating with the cult during the later Son of Sam years.

This chapter will also contain the compelling scene from December, 1996 in which the retired NYPD detective, who lives in the midwest, returned to Untermyer Park for the first time since 1971---where he pointed out to police and the author the very location he'd been told to investigate by Deuce 25 long years before---the site at which Deuce had then stated kids were being killed by cult members.

It turned out to be the same spot Berkowitz spoke of and which John Carr had also sketched on a map for Brother John Paul in the summer of '72.

In addition, this chapter will contain more significant evidence---evidence which was uncovered in December 1996 by another retired detective. This former detective visited yet another early '70s informant and was given the same information: that kids had been killed at Untermyer in the late '60s and early '70s---kids who had been obtained from "guardian homes."

This informant also named one of the same two pimps whom Berkowitz identified in 1996 as still being associated with the Sam cult and Process during the later Son of Sam era. Berkowitz said this person was actually in his Yonkers apartment in 1977.

Also included in these chapters will be new developments in the investigation of the Karen Wahlstrom (teacher) murder that occurred in Van Cortlandt Park in '65, as that case, too, moves toward a possible solution, despite the fact that so many years have passed.

In brief, in what could only be termed a fateful coincidence, the author met a relative of Wahlstrom's at a dinner party in December, 1996. That relative said: "All we knew was that she was supposedly seeing some guy who wouldn't make a commitment, and that's why she killed herself."

That seeming "tidbit" of information was actually a major breakthrough. It confirmed earlier information about Wahlstrom possibly having an affair with a former student---and also explained, finally, just why Wahlstrom was met by cult members in a room at the Van Cortlandt motel on the night of her death instead of at an entrance to Van Cortlandt park itself. In short: the evidence now strongly suggests that she'd obtained the room with her "boyfriend"----and that "boyfriend" was himself a member of the cult and was also involved in the set-up.

There have been many, many other significant details that have emerged from the 1996 official investigation---an investigation that is continuing in a highly active mode in 1997. At this point in time, it is not possible to list those newly uncovered facts in this outline because of very current and serious security considerations.

However, as the book itself is written, all those details will be incorporated. Suffice it to say that the reader will be taken along on interviews with various suspects and informants, and will go behind the scenes as the author and a team of detectives gather the final evidence as they move to bring this horrendous long-standing matter into a courtroom.

It is important to note that since the official investigation is ongoing there will be a substantial amount of new evidence that will be uncovered in the coming months. That "prediction" is accurate because the author knows what work is being accomplished, and he also knows where the investigation is headed and what detectives are now certain they will establish in the next few months. This new evidence will be incorporated into the manuscript as it becomes available.

It is worth noting here that the Nobel-winning doctor, who interacted with the cult in the '70s and was arrested for child molestation in 1996, is scheduled to go to trial on February 25, 1997. That case will receive widespread coverage as it is---let alone what would happen if the doctor's ties to the Sam cult and Process were revealed by the author.

There is, however, no doubt at this point in time that the case has been solved---a case that, as this outline shows, goes way beyond the Son of Sam shootings themselves. It is certain that new evidence, which will be documented in the near future, will add still more shocking and conclusive details---details which will only serve to buttress the overwhelming evidence that is already in hand.

CHAPTER TWENTY-SIX

THE KILLERS

This chapter will close the book, and it will open by fleshing out details of the 1996 wake that was detailed in Chapter One---the wake of the leader of the Sam cult. The chapter will then will reveal the true names of some 75 individuals, including this now-deceased leader. Those names are contained in a signed and witnessed statement---a statement which is as current as the day in 1996 when it was signed.

It is a statement that has been corroborated by the vast amounts of evidence and by the statements of others---both non-involved witnesses and conspirators themselves---that will have appeared previously in the book.

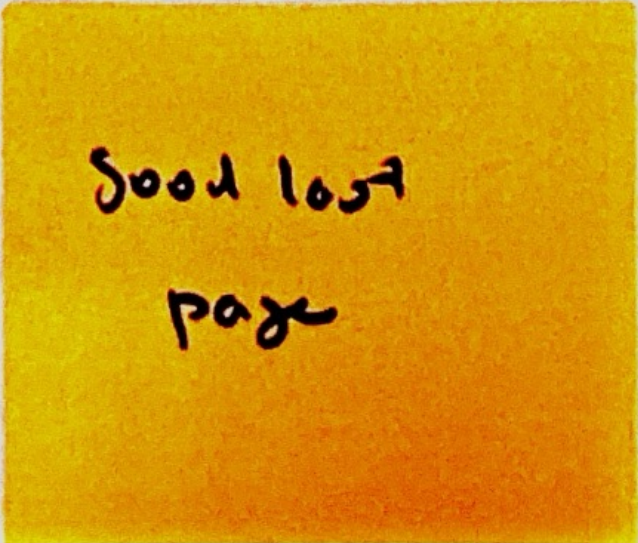

The person who signed this statement is David Berkowitz. He has never before put his signature on a document such as this---and, to state it mildly, it is an explosive document. As it is now in the hands of authorities, it has officially become evidence and is part of the official, legal case file.

These 75 individuals all played roles, in one form or another, in either the Son of Sam case, in the Sam cult's "social environment," or they were members of The Process' who were involved in the Son of Sam murders.

The Son of Sam shooters will be named, along with other crime scene accomplices and the remaining members of The Twenty-Two Disciples of Hell. The names of all the attendees at that notorious "planning meeting" will also be revealed---including the identities of the culpable Process members and leaders in attendance that night.

Along with the names, a "biography" and rap sheet data on each individual will appear, and their specific tasks in the Sam case---and/or other cases, too---will be described.

CASE SOLVED.
